Saratoga's First District Opponent Is to Be Lewisville

Hempstead Champions in Second Game of District 10 Tourney

HEMPSTEAD TEAMS

Patmos, Fulton, Spring Hill, Guernsey Also in Tournament

The district 10 senior boys' basketball tournament opens Thursday night in the Stamps and Lewisville High School gymnasiums with five Hempstead county teams to see action in the first rounds.

Saratoga High School, recent winners of the Hempstead county tournament at Bleivins, is scheduled to meet Lewisville in the second game at Lewisville.

Patmos High School, another Hempstead county entry, will open the tournament against Ashdown. Fulton meets Mineral Springs in the third game at Lewisville.

Spring Hill High School will meet Village in the first game at Stamps Thursday night. Guernsey takes on Bright Star in the last game Thursday night. Other teams to meet are Stamps vs. Magnolia and Walkerville vs. Garland.

The district tournament was originally scheduled to start at Lewisville Friday morning, but due to the large entry list it was decided by the officials to open play Thursday night in order to complete the tournament by Saturday night.

It is believed by officials that a greater number of teams are entering the tournament this year than any time in recent history, making it necessary to play both Lewisville and Stamps in order to clear the lower brackets.

Bodew, Nevada county champion, is expected to play in the district nine tourney tonight at Camden.

Brisbane Estate to Pay Huge Tax

No. 1 Editor Left Fortune 20 to 30 Millions—Tax Is 9 Millions

TRENTON, N. J.—(AP)—Inheritance taxes from the Arthur Brisbane estate are expected to solve New Jersey's 1937 relief financing. The state's 1936 relief question was solved largely through an inheritance tax payment of more than $15,000,000 from the estate of John T. Dorrance, Camden soup manufacturer.

At a senate hearing on a bill to divert nearly $8,000,000 of highway funds to a $12,000,000 relief program, Harry E. Taylor, secretary of the New Jersey Farm Bureau, said:

"Brisbane voted in New Jersey and the state is entitled to the inheritance tax on his estate, estimated at $20,000,000 to $30,000,000. At such a figure New Jersey will receive $9,000,000."

Poison Pair Given Life Imprisonment

Woman and Lover Convicted of Murdering Her Husband

OZARK, Ark.—(AP)—Separate circuit juries fixed terms of life imprisonment Wednesday for Mrs. Julia Larrimore, 40, and Arch Doss, 26, hunchback relief worker, for the poison murder of her husband, Monroe Larrimore, 44, World war veteran, last December.

One jury convicted Mrs. Larrimore of a first degree murder charge Wednesday following a two-day trial. When arrested, she denied any connection with her husband's death. She did not testify at her trial.

Doss pleaded guilty last week to a similar charge and a second jury, empaneled fixed his punishment, after five minutes deliberation.

Mrs. Larrimore's daughter by a first husband, Luna Kate Cagle, 18, and Haskell Belt, her 19-year-old boy friend, were exonerated recently of charge of accessory to murder in connection with the case.

Doss said he and Mrs. Larrimore plotted Larrimore's death so that they could continue a love affair.

Doss said he placed poison in whisky and gave it to Larrimore at a backwoods dance. Larrimore died in convulsions a short while later.

Boss Sits Down on Sitdown Strike

One sitdown strike deserves another, was the opinion of Walter Fry, head of Fry Products, Inc., Detroit, who is shown above enjoying a chicken dinner while conducting the first employers' sitdown strike single-handed. "I get the orders," said Fry, who decided that as long as he didn't work neither could his 100 girl employees, who struck in the plant for higher pay. Fry ate, shaved and read in his office, enjoying long naps on a couch there.

Amateur Events at High School Auditorium at 7:30 Friday Night

Thirty-five contestants had registered Thursday as entries in the Amateur Night program to be given at 7:30 p. m. Friday in the auditorium of Hope High School.

Mr. Jones said the show would provide a variety of entertainment worthwhile. The program will last about two hours. All school students will be admitted for 10 cents, adults 25 cents.

Proceeds will be used to purchase reading material for the Hope High School library.

Contestants will compete for awards amounting to $10, $5 and $2.

16 States Favor Court Proposal; 24 Opposed to It

On Popular Basis, Straw Vote Is Nearly 2-to-1 Against Plan

CLOSE TO 300,000

NEA Tabulation Now 102,124 in Favor, and 190,580 Against Plan

By WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1937, NEA Service, Inc.)

Balloting approached the 300,000 mark in the NEA Service supreme court poll as tabulations poured in from 203 cities in 40 states.

Exact totals at last compilation are: For the proposal to reorganize the U. S. Supreme Court, 102,124; against the plan, 190,580—a grand total of 292,704 ballots.

Sixteen states had a majority for the plan, while 24 were voting against it. A regional tabulation showed that the only section of the country polling a majority for the plan was the south, with 53 per cent of the votes favorable, while the east was a tower of strength against the plan with 82 per cent of the votes unfavorable. The west was showing a small majority against the plan, about 55 per cent, and the mid-west somewhat stronger against it with 63 per cent so minded.

A high-water mark in the number of votes cast was reached by the St. Louis Star-Times, through which 11,633 people cast 13,584 votes for the reconsideration. Amendments to the bill stripped from it a section which would have given the State Democratic Central Committee complete control over county elections.

The bill as passed would require the announcement of election results within 24 hours after the polls closed, would provide for the burning of duplicate ballots, and would add special guards to the polls.

Senator Ellis of Bentonville, author of the bill, urged its passage as a means of increasing, not diminishing, revenue for higher educational institutions. He said it would permit dealers to retail for 15 cents per package cigarettes now selling at 20 cents, and that it would stop "bootlegging" of cigarettes from adjoining states with lower state cigarette taxes.

He said that the schools are not sincere in opposing the bill, since they plan and 4049 votes against it, thus reversing by better than three to one the country-wide trend.

Senate Cuts Cigarette Tax
LITTLE ROCK.—Reduction of the cigarette tax from five cents to three cents per package was approved by the senate Wednesday, despite vigorous objection from opponents of the measure who charged that it would result in diminished income for state educational institutions and would upset bond contracts which several state colleges have made to support building programs. The bill eliminates the state cigar tax.

World's Giant Peach Orchard Now in Bloom Near Nashville

Pink Blossoms on 1 1/2 Million Trees, Covering 17,000 Acres, Celebrate the Advent of Another Spring

NASHVILLE, Ark.—A marvelous scene—17,000 acres of peach trees in full bloom, lying between Kirby and Mineral Springs, Arkansas on Highway No. 27.

Did you ever notice a peach tree in full bloom? Then stop for a minute and picture a scene of 1,500,000 peach trees standing in gorgeous military array and sweeping off over undulating hillsides as far as the eye can see, a mass of beautiful pink blossoms.

Last year there were over half a million bushels of peaches shipped from this district, notwithstanding there was a short crop on account of the drought.

People visiting the orchards also may visit the diamond mines, in which are found the only genuine diamonds in North America, and from which over 100,000 stones have been recovered, one weighing over 40 carats. The quality of these stones surpasses that of the South African diamonds. These mines are about one and one-half miles south of Murfreesboro, Ark.

There are several cinnabar (quicksilver) mines in operation about 10 miles north of Murfreesboro which also may be visited.

Mrs. R. E. Cain Is Official of D. A. R.

The Arkansas Daughters of the American Revolution concluded a two-day convention at Texarkana Wednesday with the election of new officers and the selection of Pine Bluff as the next meeting place in 1938. Hot Springs was selected for the 1939 session.

Mrs. R. E. Cain of Hope was elected secretary-treasurer. She will serve two years. Mrs. R. E. Martin of Texarkana was elected state registrar.

Mrs. John F. Weiman, Little Rock, national chairman of the United Daughters of 1812, was defeated by Mrs. P. F. Crutcher, Pine Bluff, for recording secretary. Mrs. A. E. Gerig of Arkadelphia was elected chaplain.

Other officers will serve another year on present terms. They are: Mrs. Homer F. Sloan, Marked Tree, state regent; Mrs. Charles Henry, Little Rock, vice regent; Mrs. D. F. Elliott, Jonesboro, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William F. Lake, Hot Springs, treasurer; Miss Lawrence Butt, Boutham, librarian; Mrs. David M. Briggs, Proctor, curator; Mrs. George Norman, Hamburg, historian; Mrs. Thomas F. Short, DeQueen, genealogist; Mrs. Allen Cox, Helena, parliamentarian.

List of Welfare Names Restricted

State Board Must Choose Members From List of County Nominees

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Attorney General Jack Holt held Thursday that the State Welfare Board must select its county boards only from the list of nominations submitted from county officials.

Holt issued this opinion at the request of Miss Gussie Haynie, welfare commissioner, who asked, "if, in the judgment of the State Welfare Board the names furnished by the five constitutional officers from their respective counties are not proper persons for county boards, will the state board, in that event, be authorized under Act 41 to name county boards and disregard the list sent in by the five constitutional officers?"

Townsend Guilty in Contempt Case

May Face Prison Term for "Walking Out" on Congress Probe

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Dr. F. E. Townsend, starting straight ahead without a flicker of emotion on his lean, angular face, heard a federal jury declare Wednesday that he was guilty of contempt of the House of Representatives.

The verdict laid the old age pension man open to a possible jail sentence for his walkout last May on a House committee investigating the Townsend movement. The maximum penalty is $1,000 fine and a year in jail.

"The verdict was not unexpected," Townsend said. "We have some reason to expect such a verdict here, but expect to win eventually. In any case my work will go on. This will make no difference."

Justice Peyton Gordon allowed the 70-year-old doctor three days in which to file a motion for a new trial and delayed passing sentence until after notice of the motion.

Nichols said: "I think we can work out a way to clear up this morning hour."

The other amendment to the Nichols bill would permit the sale of beer up to four per cent by weight in places other than the liquor stores. Beer of a higher percentage of alcohol could be sold only in liquor stores. The bill originally provided that beer of higher than 3.2 per cent alcohol must be sold in liquor stores.

Mrs. Simpson in Return to Society

Abandons Seclusion on the Riviera, But Objects to Stares

CANNES, France.—(AP)—Wallis Warfield Simpson, swinging out into Riviera society Wednesday night retained her aversion to being stared at. With Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, her hosts at the Villa Lou Vici, she dined with Sir Pomeroy and Lady Burton at the Chateau La Croix near Antibes.

Some sources said Mrs. Simpson might be interested in buying the chateau for a future residence after her marriage to the Duke of Windsor.

Mrs. Simpson dined last night with Mr. and Mrs. Sidney T. Allen of St. Louis, Mo., at a hotel restaurant. Seated in the dining room, Mrs. Simpson suddenly became aware of many eyes on her and was reported to have said to her hostess:

"I don't like this. Can't we have a screen so people won't stare at us? I don't like it."

"All right," Mrs. Allen replied, ordering a waiter to get a screen, close the windows and draw the curtains in spite of the heat—and the other guests.

One evidence of Mrs. Simpson's desire to "get back into the world," her friends said, was her three-day visit at a house party given by W. Somerset Maugham, British novelist.

Compromise Plan on Vesey Liquor Bill Ends in Fight

Prohis Try to Jam Bill Through, But Move Is Defeated

ANOTHER DAY GONE

Blair of Logan County Paralyzes House With Continuous Speech

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—A proposal compromise to end the lengthy deadlock over the Vesey prohibition bill fell through in the house Thursday when the drowsy reopened their fight to have the measure transmitted to the senate immediately.

Their efforts were frustrated when Blair of Logan, taking the floor on a point of personal privilege, filibustered the morning hour to death with a speech on the proposal for license bill, the game protection bill, the importance of having the journal read and events of Wednesday night's session. It was the seventh day of filibustering.

Compromise Fails
Blair, opposing the Vesey bill, told the house that Nichols of Logan, an ardent prohibitionist, had agreed with him and Nyberg of Phillips county, director of the anti-prohibition forces, that if the house would pass the Nichols bill to prohibit liquor advertising by radio and billboards and simplify the calling of liquor option elections, the Vesey bill would be dropped.

The drowsy strategy Thursday took the form of a motion by Coffelt of Saline to withdraw the previous motion to table Nyberg's move to amend the emergency clause. It passed 35 to 32.

Blair then moved that "we immediately take up the Vesey bill and stay on that question until we dispose of it."

Blair's filibuster sent Coffelt's motion over to the unfinished business classification.

Compromise That Failed
LITTLE ROCK.—Introduction of two proposed amendments Wednesday night to a bill prohibiting the advertising of liquor may pave the way for a compromise to end the house parliamentary tangle over a measure to repeal the Arkansas liquor legislation law.

Both Nyberg of Phillips, anti-prohibitionist, and Nichols of Logan, a Baptist minister and dry leader, announced in the house that they believed the way had been found for them to permit action on bills at the morning hour, which has been consumed the past week in filibusters to prevent the final consideration of the Vesey bill, to return prohibition, but held in the house as unfinished business by an attempt to amend the emergency clause which failed of adoption.

One of the amendments offered last night to a bill sponsored by Nichols to prohibit liquor advertising would eliminate a provision banning from newspapers. The bill still would prohibit advertising by radio or signboard.

"If you will give me about ten seconds of your time I will advise you that we have a chance to iron out the difficulties in regards to this morning hour situation," Nyberg told the house. "Mr. Nichols has agreed to two amendments to his bill that may solve the problem."

Nichols said: "I think we can work out a way to clear up this morning hour."

The other amendment to the Nichols bill would permit the sale of beer up to four per cent by weight in places other than the liquor stores. Beer of a higher percentage of alcohol could be sold only in liquor stores. The bill originally provided that beer of higher than 3.2 per cent alcohol must be sold in liquor stores.

CHAPTER I

The June sun struck his shoulders with pleasant warmth as he parted the brush, bridged a wide ditch easily and emerged on the open backwoods road.

He squinted eyes a trifle deeper but of the same clear blue as the sky above him. And squinting, his tanned face broke into little crinkles around his eyes and into unaccustomed furrows on a broad brow that was lighter where the line of his hair began. He thrust his hands into breeches pockets, squared his shoulders and swung into a brisk stride.

Over his shoulder he addressed his companion. "Gettin' on toward lunch." He was agreed with the enthusiastic tail wagging at the heels of his riding boots.

"Now, my good fellow," he continued, having an appreciative audience, "if this were the New England of legend, we would approach the next dwelling with a pleasant smile and a hungry look and be invited to join the family at its noonday meal. As it is, we've got to find our way out of this maze of backwoods and push on to our hosts."

He glanced at his watch, saw that it was 20 minutes past noon. Then he saw the spreading gables of the gray house through a frame of trees and whistled softly to himself.

It brought a light to his eyes—this picture of majestic chimneys that rose to the tops of aged trees, the grace of dwelling and grounds mellowing together and growing into each other, the overtones of bright pinks and yellows, the blues obscured against the glowing green of the garden, colors that were like bright ribbons on a lady's easy gown.

There was, as he had expected, a wall of field stone high up. He swung himself onto it. "It's hot past twelve, Miss Daphne," a strident voice from within the house echoed. "Whatcha want for lunch?"

Daphne Brett pushed back a strand of black curly hair from a white and perspiring brow and at back on her heels.

"If you've brought eggs, there'll be scrambled eggs, bread and butter and fruit. I didn't bring anything else from town," she called from the top of the stair well. Then, anxiously: "Prunella, have a look at how the garden's coming."

"Yes, ma'am." Prunella answered cheerfully. "Just stop worryin' about this downstairs. I got things mostly ready. Sure you don't want me to give you a hand p there?"

Daphne rubbed the spot in her back that was beginning to burn and said, "No, thanks. I'll be finished here by three. They won't be here until four."

"My sakes, but it'll seem strange to have anybody but Brett's livin' in this house," the conversational voice continued from below.

"You're telling me," Daphne Brett muttered and gave her mop a vicious squeeze.

"We always hoped you'd be comin' back to Plantersport when Jennifer was graduated from that finishin' school," Prunella carried on.

"We will some day soon," Daphne answered with a cheerfulness she didn't feel. His disap-

Do Not Bar Sunlight Completely From Room of Measles Victim

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
 Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Measles is in most instances a self-limiting disease. Everything must be done, therefore, to permit measles to run a satisfactory, quiet course, and to ward off dangerous complications.

The child must be put to bed in a quiet room. Measures must be taken to prevent glare from irritating his eyes, but it is not advisable to bar sunlight completely from the room.

For years, it was customary of keep the sickroom darkened. Now it is better to wear dark colored glasses in order to keep out the light, as the glare is painful. Furthermore, the child should not be permitted to read, nor should there be a brilliant, irritating artificial light.

Sometimes irritation of the eyes will cause the eyelids to stick together. For this, most doctors prescribe washing with slightly warm boric acid solution or warm water, which will remove the crusts and prevent general irritation.

The bed cover must not be too heavy while there is fever, but should be heavy enough to prevent chilling. If the child is very restless, it is customary to give him a warm sponge bath just before he goes to sleep. This serves not only to control the fever,

but also to stop the restlessness.
 After the sponge bath, his skin may be powdered with any light, clean tal-cum powder, which helps also prevent irritation of the skin. If there is much itching, or peeling of the skin, the doctor can prescribe lotions containing soda or other substances.

The food of the child should be chiefly of the light and fluid type as long as he has any fever. Then, as the fever disappears and the child begins to get better, it is customary to serve him plenty of nutritious food, particularly substances containing iron and vitamins, so as to build up his blood.

It is not wise to give large amounts of laxatives or cathartics for the bowels; in fact, these should never be given to sick children without a doctor's prescription.

The patient, however, should be given plenty of fluids, including drinks which tend toward alkalization, such as orangeade, orange juice, and lemonade.

In very severe cases of measles it has sometimes been customary to attempt use of convalescent serum; that is, the fluid matter taken from the blood of a person who has recovered recently from the disease.

Understanding Attitude Helps Teach Honesty

"Look at me," thundered Mr. Brown.
 "And no tricks now. Were you on High Street, or weren't you?"
 Jim was just about to say that he had coasted down High Street twice before he sought the safer lane. But his father's voice and manner sent his last ounce of courage out through his fingers.

The boy gulped and looked at his father's tie. "No, no, sir."
 "But you were with Timothy, and Timothy was hurt on High Street."
 "I left him."

"I know you did. But what I'm trying to get at," boomed Mr. Brown, "is when you left him. You have orders to stay away from that hill."
 "Yes, sir, I know."

"What is more important to me than anything else, James, is your honesty."
 Mr. Brown laid a heavy hand on Jim's shoulder. "I can stand for a bit of disobedience, but I can't stand a quibbling coward. I fired Jenks last week for giving me the wrong answer."

Mrs. Brown dared to interrupt. "Tom, would you have dismissed Jerry Jenks
 if he had given you the right answer?"
 "H'm. Well, yes, I would. He'd been soldiering. Were you on High Street?"

Silenced by Accusing Manner Jim got his eyes up at his father's chin, and made no answer.

"I thought so."
 "I only took two rides and then I left Tim and went over to the lane.
 There was nobody there. When the big boys came, I beat it."

A Book a Day

Animal Stories, Mysteries on New List for Children

Periodically Bruce Catton's book review column is given over to Olive Roberts Barton, famed child training authority, for an appraisal of the latest books for children.
 Here is another of her authoritative articles.

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

If children like animals, they want to read about them, and there are a wide variety of such books on the stands.
 "Erroll," by Kathleen C. Greene (Lippincott; $2), gives the title role to a Cairn puppy, pet of five English children. The book opens with the family moving from London to the country.
 Into their new life come picnics and sports, a horse show in which the twins take ribbons, a fire, and a robbery. For children from eight to 10, this story is as real as oatmeal in the morning.

Everyone down to the five-year-old can take pointers from "My Circus Animals" (Hough Mifflin; $2), by V. L. Durov, world-famous animal trainer. Stressing gentleness and sympathy as his first rules, he tells just how he taught tricks to his dogs, pigs, monkey, and elephants, in a series of lively and amusing anecdotes.

Catherine Gate Colburn has gone behind the scenes of history to write the experiences of animals who took part in great events. From the story of the bull who came to America with the Vikings, to the Puritan cat, and the horses of Cortez, the tales in "Animal Frontiers" (Little, Brown; $2) are all true gleanings from old records.

No milk-and-water reading diet is "Fierce-Face" (Dutton; $1.50), a book for children from five to 10. Dhan Gopal Mukerji writes a powerful story of a tiger cub being trained by its mother to live skillfully in the jungle life. A red-blooded subject done in superb prose.

Some splendid mysteries, that will have children aged, also are listed among the new books.

"Mr. X," by Griffin Jay (Scribner; $1.50), is a swift adventure-mystery for boys of Junior-high school age, in which the young members of a crime prevention club are instrumental in solving a kidnapping. This is a plausible, twentieth-century story, as the author states that anti-crime bands much like the one in the book are actually being formed. Tension and danger mount to a high climax.
 Hawaii forms the setting of "Footprints in the Dust" (Longmans; $2), a

 By his own admission, Eilshemmus has painted 9,600 pictures; written, he says 200 books, most of them unpublished; and composed perhaps a hundred pieces of music. For years he went about the street handing his card painter, poet, composer, marksman, inventor and "ex-fancy amateur dancer."

 Nevertheless, critics remained distinctly unfriendly.

He also sent letters to newspapers,
 letters which deplored the state of art,

 variety, "Mightiest All-Round Man."
 The "Mightiest All-Round Man" has fallen on evil days. Four years ago a taxi backed into him. He has been chair-bound ever since. He ascribes the accident to the evil spirits of his enemies.

Now he no longer paints or writes.
 He sits with his back to the window in an old-fashioned brownstone house where he lives in lonely bachelorhood with a bachelor brother. His view takes in the star and hall. The house has never been wired for electricity.

Famous At Last Eilshemmus is now 73 years old, and fame, long in coming, has finally arrived. Retrospective shows are history, and his pictures hang in the great museums of the world—the Metropolitan, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the Cleveland museum, Detroit institute, Phillips Memorial gallery in Washington, and the Luxembourg in Paris. His erstwhile critics have swallowed their harsh words and ransacked the treasury of glowing adjectives in his praise.

All this has made no difference to Eilshemmus.
 "Don't put me down as an eccentric,"
 he warns. "I'm a great man."

His shaggy white beard thrusts forward dramatically, and he resumes:
 "Great art is vision, imagination—nothing else. Nobody can beat me for nudes—I'm bigger than Michelangelo."

Limped blue eyes flash fire and gauged hands gesture. As he speaks he wears the look of a man deliciously surprising himself by the things he is saying. When he had recovered, he went on:
 "Here is one of my books. Poe wrote his in 10 years. I wrote mine in 10 hours. Poe? Bah! I'm better than Poe."
 "Some of those fellows make fun of me. That doesn't pay. You don't make for armadillos that overrun this region.

 The Ogden family reports unusual production from a flock of 100 white

After the Autumn's crimson flare
On dune and hollow,
From pale cloud-curtains of the air
Snow petals scatter. And the bare Meadows lie fallow.
Awfully the harrowin' wind, the frost,
The cobalt shadow,
And then the spring with its gay host
Of fragrant clover will accost
The field and meadow.
Change is the only changeless thing!
And this must be Until our last long sleep shall bring
And endless springtime blossoming
And immortality. . . . Selected.

WITH THE LADIES

By Helen Welshimer

Movie Heroes Typify Romance Women Feel They Have Missed

"Men as women wish they were!" Or, to be more explicit, Robert Taylor! Not that Robert Taylor is the answer to every woman's romantic urge. In fact, when Jane Little, well-known love-story writer and editor, recently quoted the slogan as descriptive of the men with whom she peoples her story pages, she may not have had the darling of the cinema in her mind at all.

Maybe SHE didn't—but the women of America do.

Take that kissing bee in Baltimore. The women of the city had put on their prettiest gowns and most exciting slippers, not to celebrate a big national event, but because Robert Taylor was going to stand on the platform and make a speech.

The orchestra was playing softly when the handsome hero came. He began his walk between lines of members of the official hostesses committee. Women surged against that line, but it didn't give until the motion picture actor was half way to the platform. Then the ladies broke through and began to plant their lipstick kisses on his face. He ran to the platform, and when he left the stage police called even at that, an aggressive admirer ripped off his necktie and paroled the pieces among her friends.

Getting Away From the Prosaic Men as women wish they were! Robert Taylor, Tyrone Power, Clark Gable, Gary Cooper, William Powell—

There are some women who are completely satisfied with their husbands, women who watch the antics of cinema love with sympathetic amusement, happy because they married the men they did. There is a multitude of other women who thrill vicariously to a stage endeavor because it satisfies their romantic wishing. It does not mean that the wisher does not love her husband devotedly. She may—but he and she and circumstances have placed her in a prosaic world, so she slips away gratefully, at times, to a drama as she wishes it might have been.

The small girl with freckles and skimp braids enters into the role of the golden-haired princess who sat in a tower on a glass hill waiting for a knight to rescue her, when the small girl reads the fairy-tale. She catches a choked breath when the knight with the crimson plume rides up the hill on his coal black steed. Her plain little face is sweet and wistful as she wishes that she might live, just for a day, between the covers of a story-book instead of a neighborhood where the boys wear stocking caps and throw snowballs.

Women Cling to Memories Yet, if the little girl were granted her wish, and stepped through Lewis Carroll's looking glass, she would not be at ease with the knight. She would gratefully welcome a good game of hide-and-go-seek with the boys who live next door or around the corner.

It is small wonder that the little girl, with her impulse not gratified—and therefore cured—grows up, associating names of glorified lovers with the romance she feels she missed. She wishes that she might have been the type of girl, who could have lived in a drama, where the kind of men she adores would have been plentiful.

Women are practical, though. And brave. They make the most of what they have. In similar manner, their husbands do the same thing. They, too, forget the woman at their side as the motion picture drama unfolds, yielding to the graces of a lovely creature on the screen.

There is one difference between the majority of men and women, though. Men will forget a woman's fragile loveliness when the play is over. Women will remember a man's lean, lithe strength.

Men never struggle to capture a woman's necklace for romance's sake. The ladies rejoice in a strangle hold on a necktie. (Copyright, 1937, NEA Service, Inc.)

Woman Abandons Suit on Rubinoff

But District Attorney Asks Peggy to Do Some 'Explaining'

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Peggy Garcia's $500,000 breach of promise suit against Dave Rubinoff, the fighter, was switched suddenly from a civil court to the district attorney's office Wednesday.

An assistant prosecutor, Eugene J. Finnegan, said he would invite the beautiful blonde from Virginia to do some explaining at his office after he had studied the charges she made before a Supreme Court jury against Rubinoff.

"I want to know," said Finnegan, "whose idea it was to start and prosecute this suit." He said he would seek to determine whether any element of extortion was involved.

The trial was halted shortly after Miss Garcia and her lawyer returned from a trip to Virginia, where they sought to straighten out her marital history. In discontinuing the action, Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo held that Miss Garcia technically was a married woman at the time she claims Rubinoff swept her off her feet with his "big beautiful smile" and seduced her with a promise of marriage.

The former "Follies" girl herself testified this morning that she was married at the age of 11 to "a boy I didn't know very well." Explaining her previous denials of having been involved in any such ceremony she said she "wouldn't call it a marriage" because her husband's mother thought it was "ridiculous" and kept them apart.

Rubinoff smiled broadly when the case was halted but his lawyer protested against being deprived of an opportunity to clear him of the "fantastic charges" made by Miss Garcia. Later Rubinoff said he was "keenly disappointed" at the way the trial ended.

Miss Garcia, who adopted the name of a cigar in an effort to get a job as a Spanish tango dancer, testified last week that the violin player made ardent love to her in 1933 after they met in a Harlem night spot. Rubinoff denied ever meeting the girl.

GOAT THEO THEATERS

At the Saenger The most famous evasry charge in history is reenacted in "The Charge of the Light Brigade"—starring Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland—now showing at the Saenger.

The soul-stirring spirit of Lord Tennyson's immortal poem "Charge of the Light Brigade" carries through the picture to the terrific climax—although the tragic love story of the two English brothers who love the same Scottish girl, makes up the real substance of the story. It is at an Army post in India that the arduous of Captain Geoffrey Vickers and Elsie Campbell begins and ends. The ill-fated lovers are unforgettable portrayed by Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland.

All the members of the large cast are admirably suited to their parts, but special mention is deserved by Henry Stephenson, field Marshal in the Crimea; Nigel Bruce, Commander of the Light Brigade; Donald Crisp as the father of the heroine and one of those slain at Chukoti; David Niven and G. P. Huntley, Jr., as Army officers; C. Huntley Gordon as Surat Khan, Amir of Suristan; and Spring Byington as the wife of a British Army officer.

Sir Guy Standing Dies Suddenly, 63

Noted English Actor in American Films Heart Ailment Victim

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—(AP)—Sir Guy Standing, 63, distinguished English motion picture actor, fell dead Wednesday while chatting with an attendant in the garage where he kept his automobile. An instant before he collapsed Sir Guy had replied in answer to a question about his health, "I never felt better."

Dr. D. D. Young, who hurried to the actor from Emergency hospital, said he believed Sir Guy succumbed to a heart attack.

A black widow spider, his friends said Wednesday night, probably was the indirect cause of death. He was bitten during the filming of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and had complained of recurrent pains in his legs ever since.

Standing was born in London. Eldest son of a theatrical family, he ran away from home to join a touring troupe. In the theater when the World War began, he joined the English navy, rose to the rank of commander, and was knighted by the late King George V.

After the armistice, he returned to the stage and eventually came to Hollywood. His most recent picture was "Lloyd's of London," his first, "The Story of Temple Drake."

In Hollywood he maintained sumptuous bachelor quarters at Malibu lake, 30 miles from the studios. His only companion was his valet, Jim Fuller. He was devoted to sailing, golfing and music.

He was widely admired among the movie set but seldom attended any of its social functions. Recently, when a young film actress he knew only slightly was stricken with a serious disease and required a year's hospitalization, he contributed $1,000 to her expenses.

His brother, Wyndham Standing, film actor, said Sir Guy had been married three times. His first wife, the brother said, was the late Isabel Urquhart, New York social figure. They were divorced and he married an actress, Blanche Burton, who has since died. Their children, Wyndham Standing said, are Guy Standing Jr., and Katherine Standing, both of whom are believed to be on the state in England. The third Mrs. Standing was Dorothy Hammond, Sir Guy's brother said.

Husband Is Shot by 'Girl Bride'

Marriage which began when she was 14 came to a tragic climax for Mrs. Susana Lara, above, 18, when she shot and seriously wounded her husband, Jesse, 29, in their Toledo, O. home after he accused her of "running around with other men." Mrs. Lara told police she fired through the bedroom door after she had locked herself in to escape her husband.

by Senator Thompson that this "emphatically is not the intent of the bill." He declared that he wants chain stores to continue in operation, but only wants them to pay their just share of state expense.

Among those opposing the bill was Senator Majors, who said that chain stores are not so profitable to operate as their opponents have claimed, and that they have been of public service in setting low price standards which other stores have had to meet.

"This idea that outsiders should be prevented from coming in and making money in our state is wrong," he said. "If other states should take the same attitude, a state like Arkansas, which produces raw materials chiefly, couldn't even survive. If private merchants don't have sufficient command of good business methods to compete with the chain stores, the public should not be burdened with results of their ignorance and should be permitted to buy wherever it is to their advantage."

Senator Coleman, speaking against the bill, said that the practice of paying tenants and day laborers in eastern Arkansas in cash is growing, and that people on low wage scales should have the benefit of cheap places to trade.

"This bill wouldn't benefit anybody but the wholesalers," he said. "There isn't any use in trying to attract industries to Arkansas if you are going to pass laws like this one and run business out."

Senator Ward declared that "this last chain store bill is no improvement on the first. The only crime the chain stores have committed is that of selling groceries to poor people cheaper than their competitors."

Tax on Peddlers Rejected
The Senate refused to place a tax on rolling stores and peddlers after extended debate on a bill introduced as a compromise measure by a special rolling stores committee.

Senator Featherston spoke in behalf of the bill, which was opposed by Senators Hall, Holland, Scrimshire and others who declared that it would result in hardship for rural communities which depend on rolling stores and peddlers for supplies. The vote on

Hammons Says Minimum Membership Is 20 at $12 for 6 Months

The Hope golf course will not be operated by Foy H. Hammons this summer unless 20 members are signed up at a membership fee of $12 for six months.

Hammons said Thursday that he had been asked to operate the course this year, but declined the offer unless he could be assured he wouldn't "go in the hole" on the proposition.

Hammons pointed out the rent on the course, upkeep and repairs would cost more than $200.

A membership fee of $12 will be charged for the entire year. Persons interested in the club are asked to notify Mr. Hammons at once.

Went Down and Got 'Em
NORMAN, Okla.—(AP)—Lawrence (Jap) Haskell, University of Oklahoma baseball coach, tells his infielders to go down in the dust and get 'em. Well, he can do that, too.

While Haskell was hunting quail near here his setter froze on a bird that wouldn't flush. Haskell laid aside his gun, dove head first into a clump of grass after the quail.

He came up quail in hand, and knob on forehead. He inhaled tea into a blackjack stump, hidden by the grass.

UNIVERSITY, Ala.—(AP)—When Coach Richard Bricketts of the University of Alabama boxers told his men to sleep without pillows to strengthen neck muscles, he started something, says a university publicity release. A number of students not out for boxing followed suit. Their necks have increased in size until their shirts won't fit.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

A cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. You can relieve them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery that aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and to relieve the irritation and inflammation as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Medical authorities have for many years recognized the wonderful effects of Beechwood Creosote for treating coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations. A chemist worked out a special process of blending Creosote with other ingredients so that now in Creomulsion you get a real dose of Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and can even be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children. Thousands of doctors now use Creomulsion in their own families and practice, and druggists rank Creomulsion top because in this genuine, original product you can get a real dose of Creosote so emulsified that it goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles, especially those that start with a common cold and hang on and on. Get a bottle of Creomulsion right now from your druggists, use it all up as directed and if you fail to get satisfactory relief, he is authorized to refund every cent of your money. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

have not attempted to equalize taxes on various classes of tobacco.

Senator Kimzey, author of a bill to reduce automobile license fees which was passed by the senate last week, said that he will vote for the bill because it sustains the principle under which his bill was drawn—the theory that a lower tax results in higher revenues because of additional use of the article taxed and a higher degree of law observance. Senator Smith, Gathings, Fagan and Wilkes also spoke in behalf of the bill.

Among its opponents were Senator Norrell, who said that "you are taking money away from the institutions of higher learning," and Senator Shaver who said "if we take this tax off here we will have to put it on somewhere else."

"I don't know any easier way to make money for the state than to tax liquor or cigarettes," he added, "but if you have to tax property to make up the difference you haven't gained much."

The vote on the bill was 20 to 11, but the emergency clause lacked one vote of adoption. Voting for the bill were Senators Armstrong, Barney, Coleman, Dillon, Ellis, Fagan, Gathings, Holloway, Kimzey, Lake, Majors, Martin, Rowell, Smith, Switzer, Wagner, Ward, Wheatley, Wilkes and Wilson. Opposed to the bill were Senators Bratton, Featherston, Hall, Hardy, Higginbotham, Livingston, Milum, Norrell, Scrimshire, Shaver, Taylor, Almont or not voting were Senators Cummings, Holland, Northcutt, and Thompson.

The bill will go to the house Thursday.

Drivers License Bill

The administration-sponsored driver's license bill was passed by a vote of 23 to 8, despite vigorous opposition. It provides for drivers' licenses for each person driving a motor vehicle, and fixes the fee at 35 cents. The present fee is 50 cents per license, which permits any member of the family to drive the automobile on the license is issued. The bill, which was introduced in the house, now goes to the governor for signature. Proceeds of the tax will be used to maintain the Arkansas Police Department, successor to the State Rangers.

Chain Store Bill Discussed

The oft-amended chain store bill introduced in the senate by Senators Fagan and Thompson was discussed at length and carried over until Thursday for further amendment. A section providing two retail stores as the minimum basis for taxation was added as a substitute for the original provision that one retail store would be subject to tax.

The bill was attacked by Senators Majors, Ward, Coleman and others who said its purpose was to drive business out of the state by unfair taxation.

Senator Thompson, speaking in behalf of the measure, declared that he would welcome adoption of a resolution authorizing investigation of state income tax payments made by large chain store operators and charged that gross sales of these concerns indicate a probable income above the amount reported to the revenue commission.

"These outside merchants should be required to contribute to the state for the privilege of operating large chains, and the bill imposes a just tax on them in proportion to the number of stores operated," he said.

Senator Hardy, who advocated passage of the bill, said that "the time will come when we have no individual merchants left." He said that he had been besieged with propaganda against the bill.

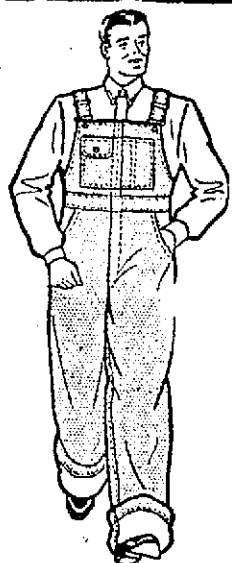

Senator Dillon asked whether the real purpose of the bill is not to exterminate chain stores, and was told

England Also Had Court Crisis, Once

George Fifth Threatened to "Pack" the British House of Lords

NEA Service Staff Correspondent
LONDON—In England, there is no court which can hold an act of Parliament illegal or in violation of the constitution. There is, therefore, no exact parallel, in English history, to President Roosevelt's plan to add justices to the U. S. Supreme Court.

But England has had its tense moments over a "packing" incident involving its highest legislative system.

It was the celebrated fight in which the House of Lords had its wings clipped, the late King George V met a serious crisis in the early days of his reign, and English history was provided with one of its most interesting chapters of the twentieth century.

The House of Lords is composed of over 600 dukes, marquesses, earls, viscounts and barons who inherit their titles and their privileges as lawmakers. It includes also the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop of York and 24 bishops of the Church of England.

The overwhelming majority of the members are Tories. It had for long been complained that the House of Lords was a Tory club, which regularly killed or emasculated any progressive measures adopted by the House of Commons when it had a Liberal party majority.

Lloyd George Denounced
Things came to a head in 1909 when the Liberals, having a majority in the Commons, formed a government under Premier H. H. Asquith, later Lord Oxford and Asquith.

The famous Lloyd George was then chancellor of the exchequer. He introduced a budget which embodied some new taxes which hit at the rich and the landed proprietors. He was denounced as if he were a Bolshevik and in his famous Limehouse speech resorted savagely.

In November, 1909, the Lords by 350 to 75 rejected the budget. The government replied by passing through the Commons, a resolution that this action was a breach of the constitution and a usurpation of the rights of the Commons.

Parliament was dissolved and an election held in January, 1910, the issue being the House of Lords' rejection of the budget. The government got a very large majority in the new House of Commons.

The Lords now passed the budget, but the blood of the Commons was up and the government passed a resolution foreshadowing the kind of parliament reform it proposed to enact into law. Its aim was to end the House of Lords as a Tory club which could always kill liberal laws.

The resolution adopted provided that a bill could become law without the consent of the House of Lords if passed in three successive sessions of the Commons, spread over a minimum period of two years.

It also provided that the House of Lords should have no power to reject or amend a bill certified by the speaker of the House of Commons as a "money bill." But it was a long distance from passing such a resolution to enacting its objects into law.

To become law it would have to receive assent from the very House of Lords it was designed to tame.

George V Won Over
There now followed a series of conferences between Tories and Liberals, aimed at ascertaining whether some agreed compromise bill for reform of the House of Lords could be reached. It failed. Asquith prepared to do battle. He was willing to dissolve Parliament again and hold a new election, the main platform of his party being reform of the House of Lords.

But he was not willing to do this unless the king would take his advice and promise to do certain things, which, at the time, were kept a deep secret. The late King George V had but recently come to the throne and this was a constitutional crisis of the greatest magnitude. He agreed to accept Asquith's advice.

The House of Commons was then dissolved, a new election held in December, 1910, the Liberal government again winning a big majority.

The government bill for reform of the House of Lords now passed through its various stages in the House of Commons. Thinking they were secure in a majority against the bill, the Diehards in the House of Lords proceeded to cut the cabinet's bill to pieces.

July 14, 1911, the cabinet addressed a memorandum to the king intimating it would be their duty to advise him to exercise his prerogative to secure the bill's passage as drafted by the government. Three days later King George replied he accepted their advice.

On July 20 Premier Asquith addressed a letter to the leaders of the Tories in which he informed them of these facts.

Threat Worked
Even then the Diehards refused to believe that extreme measures would be resorted to. Lord Morley, a Liberal peer and member of the cabinet, had to put it into plain words for them:

"If the bill should be defeated tonight, His Majesty will assent to the creation of peers sufficient in number to guard against any possible combination of the different parties in opposition by which the Parliament Bill might be exposed a second time to defeat. Every vote given against my motion tonight will be a vote for a large and prompt creation of peers."

The Diehards peers still remained unconvinced. The next day the Archbishop of Canterbury, who is a member of the House of Lords, said he was going to vote for the government's bill, having been moved "by the calumnies—I had almost said levity—with which some noble lords seem to contemplate the creation of some 500 new peers—a course of action which would make this House and indeed our country, the laughing-stock of the British Dominions and of those foreign countries whose constitutional life and progress have been largely modeled by our own."

The threat to pack the House of Lords with a vast list of new peers had its effect. The government's bill to limit the powers of the House of Lords was passed by the Lords by a vote of 131 to 114.

Hundreds of angry peers remained away. They would not vote for the bill, but they feared to vote against it.

No Jersey farm in the world has ever bred, raised and tested her equal.

The pastures are full of Jersey cows—but there's only one "April." She's the empress—a hundred times more valuable than the rank and file of Jerseys—because Mother Nature gave her everything—a perfect natural balance of all the needed elements. So she eclipses all the others.

HER NAME IN LIGHTS

By Marie Blizard
1937, NEA Service, Inc.

Illustration by E. H. Gunder

"Hello," he said before she could ask him what he wanted. "Will you please tell me who owns this place?" "It's owned by the Misses Brett," she said shortly.

pointment filled her unhappily again. She, too, had hoped that the two of them would be back here. Five years away from the home she loved hadn't changed her affection and longing for it. Five crowded, busy years in New York. Five years hoping for this very month until Jennifer's letter had come saying that she was going on to Maine to spend the summer with a schoolmate and could Daphne send her an extra hundred?

"Hi!"

Prunella straightened and her eyes followed the hailing voice to the figure seated on the back garden wall. Another tramp, she thought, and took another look. She retreated hastily and called:

"Miss Daphne, one of 'em's come. He's out back."

The company she was waiting for would hardly be "out back," Daphne thought, and stole a hurried glance out the south window, saw the dusty figure on her garden wall and knew it to be not already met. Without removing the unfattering towel that bound her hair, or the grimy effects of her morning's work, oblivious to the shapelessness of her slender figure enveloped in one of Prunella's pink gingham models, she went into the garden.

"Hello," he said before she could ask him what he wanted. "Will you tell me who owns this place?" "It's owned by the Misses Brett," she said shortly.

He didn't look at her; plainly his eyes were all for Brett Hall. "I'd like to see the interior," he said. "Also I'd like to have a bit of lunch. Do you think the Misses Brett are hospitably inclined?"

"There's nothing but scrambled eggs," Daphne said, her eyes once more on her watch. There was so much to be done in so short a time. She had no time to exchange pleasantries with stray travelers of the road, but this one looked strong. Perhaps he . . .

He let himself down from the wall before she said anything further and, with his eyes still on the house, he said, "Thanks, and what might your name be, my pretty maid?"

"THEY call me Daffy," she said crisply, and picked up her broom. "You might earn that lunch by tackling the weeds in the west garden. This place has got to look like a well-kept garden by 3 o'clock. Prunella will give you your lunch in the kitchen."

"Fair enough," he said, and tucked his pipe into a pocket of the coat he discarded at once.

Daphne forgot him. There were many things to be done. There were the bowls to fill with flowers and Daphne herself to transform from a scullery maid into a cool, charming hostess in a smart frock to give the appearance of a gentlewoman reluctantly renting her family estate for the summer.

"But we want to leave it for a year!" Mrs. Snyder said.

A year at a hundred a month!

Daphne, all too conscious of what that sum meant, couldn't rise to acceptance while her eyes and ears were assaulted by the ravages being wrought by the small Snyder brood. Determinedly she kept her eyes from the mahogany table where she could hear the rasp of a scratching spoon. She resented hearing the kicking, destructive twins. She didn't want these people living in her house, but how else was she to meet her need?

Feebly, she heard herself saying, "I didn't wish to rent for more than the summer months. Also, there is . . . someone else who has asked me to give him a little time to decide." Her voice trailed off weakly.

There was a distinctly cold silence. And then a firm footfall sounded on the gravel path. A long shadow fell across the polished floor.

"Good afternoon," the voice she had last encountered in her garden greeted them smoothly. "I've come back to tell you I've decided to accept your terms, Miss Brett. A hundred and fifty a month is quite agreeable."

Daphne's dark eyes met two bright twinkling blue ones with a question in them.

She started, recovered, and hesitated in that one brief second. "Oh, how do you do, Mr. . . . Mr. Van Dusen. I was just talking about you." She said it very fast.

To be continued.

Ford to Join Up Farm and Factory

To Build New Auto Plant on 70,000-Acre Tract Near Savannah, Ga.

WAYS, Ga.—(AP)—Henry Ford, working out a long-range program for development of this rural Georgia community, announced Tuesday he will establish an "industry" as part of the plan.

The Detroit automobile manufacturer said draftsmen are at work on plans for a plant which will be closely affiliated in operation with his newly-completed manual arts school here.

Workers in the plant which Ford said will manufacture automobile parts will have farms nearby.

Ford predicted several years ago that industries of the future will consist of small funds surrounded by farms able to sustain them.

The 70,000-acre Ford-owned tract in Bryan county, 18 miles south of Savannah, Georgia's chief seaport, will be the site of the plant.

Ford described the location as "ideal." "Look at this growth of timber," he said.

"It's a great source of fertilizer, power and revenue. We're near the railroads, too."

The manufacturer would not estimate the cost of the project and said he did not know the date construction will begin.

"We will aim, as we do in our other plants, to have the proper proportion of people of all ages," Ford said.

"We won't have to import anybody either. Folks right here will have plenty of skill. Everybody will have a part in farming, whether he owns a farm jointly or in his own name."

Ford estimated about 700 persons would take part in the project.

A large community house already has been erected on the huge tract for use of the manual arts school children and their parents. Hundreds of persons are at work improving roads, landscaping and erecting many other buildings on the property. Mr. and Mrs. Ford's winter home is located on nearby Richmond plantation.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tubes which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 2 pounds of waste. Frequent or scanty passages with aching and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, hiccups, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Hempstead Home Agent

By MELVA BULLINGTON

Spring Styles

Color is the thing, according to the advance information on spring styles, and Miss Melva Bullington, home demonstration agent, is advising 4-H club girls and home demonstration club members who are taking clothing demonstrations to watch for the popular spring shades.

4-H Clubs of the county have just completed a study of colors for different types of people. In making the study, brunettes, brownettes, blonds and redheads were picked from the group as demonstration material.

Colors will be gay this spring, although beige will again be popular, after several years' absence, and navy blue is a leading color for both dresses and suits. Gray is another popular color this spring, says Miss Sue Marshall, extension specialist in clothing and household arts, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. Prints of all kinds are seen in the fashion plates, large splashy spots of color on black grounds, or blue, green, red, orange, yellow, pink, or small all-over flower designs on similar backgrounds. The coronation influence is shown in the crown-jewel prints, and brilliant studded buttons in the shape of crown jewels are another fancy.

The new silhouette for spring is slender at the waist with more fullness in the skirt. The neckline remains high, sleeves are platter, and fullness is shirred or bled into some kind of a yoke at the shoulders. Skirts are shorter 13 inches some authorities say but "let your figure be your guide in this matter," warns Miss Marshall. Short sleeves continue to be good. Sports dresses are no longer entirely black, but have slits down to the waist and short jackets, loose and flaring, or fitted. Jackets of all lengths are popular, from a bolero to a redingote.

Sports and street dresses have the fullness in the skirt arranged as soft pleats stitched down to the hips, then allowed to fall free. All kinds of pockets are seen on street and sport dresses, but they must look useful. Afternoon dresses of plain material with print bands sometimes have a narrow band of the print stitched to the bottom of the skirt.

Wools for suits and spring coats will be kasha, flannel, worsted, or other light soft wool. Silks for dresses and blouses may be printed crepe, plain colored silk, shantung, and nubbed weaves. Cottons will show all-over prints, basket weaves, nubbed weaves, and sheer small all-over prints.

The Play Room

A place to play and relax is a part of the home plans of many Hempstead county home demonstration club women.

A "magic" corner for play or rest may be found in almost any room of the house from the cellar to the attic, suggests Miss June Donahue, extension specialist in community activities, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. A comfortable easy chair in the kitchen where the housewife can read in her free moments may soon become a social center for the household.

Each member of the family needs his own private place to keep toys and games, radio, or a bookshelf, says Miss Donahue.

Recreation leader of home demonstration clubs give suggestions at each community club meeting for family fun to be used in the homes of club members.

The Right Diet

Feeding their family for health was a demonstration carried on by home demonstration club women in Hempstead county during 1936, according to Miss Bullington, home demonstration agent. Diets containing the necessary minerals and vitamins to prevent and correct dietary deficiency diseases were adopted in these homes.

The most prevalent dietary deficiency disease in Arkansas, according to Miss Gertrude S. Conant, extension nutritionist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, is pellagra. This is caused by a lack of such foods as milk, lean meat, eggs, green leafy vegetables, and yeast breads. The particular vitamin which prevents this disease is found in liberal amounts in these foods, while yeast is used as a cure for this trouble.

Another deficiency disease is anemia which is caused by a lack of iron in the food, or by a physical disability to utilize such iron. Liver, egg yolks, and greens are all rich in iron and are also rich in the vitamins which enable the body to utilize the iron in building the haemoglobin of the red blood cells.

If the children's teeth begin to decay, it is a sign that more fruit and raw vegetables are needed in the diet to furnish Vitamin C, says Miss Conant. Healthy teeth, healthy bones, a healthy body and a good disposition are the result of a well-balanced diet, she declared.

Year's Food Supply

Making out the grocery lists a year ahead of time, home demonstration club members of Hempstead county are busy planning the year's supply of food. Well laid food production plans mean well balanced meals throughout the year, she points out.

The average family will need a half-acre garden, 20 to 50 chickens, two cows and a small orchard to fill the food budget and provide a plentiful supply of milk, butter, cheese, eggs, vegetables, and fruits necessary to good health, says Miss Gertrude E. Conant, extension nutritionist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

The more food produced at home, the less actual money will have to be spent for necessities, the nutritionist declares. In 1936, 4960 Arkansas farm families followed a year-round food supply plan, resulting in better balanced diets, better health, and a considerable saving in expenditures.
